Headline:
Dry with warm sunny spells today. Much colder on Monday.

Today:
A cloudy start to Sunday, although it will be largely dry. The cloud will gradually thin and break to give way to some decent spells of sunshine by the afternoon. Feeling rather warm in the sunshine, with light winds. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Tonight:
After a fine and dry evening, it will turn increasingly cloudy from the north overnight, which will give some outbreaks of rain by dawn. Breezy too. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Monday:
Cloudy with some outbreaks of rain during Monday morning, although these will quickly clear away southwards. Drier and sunnier in the afternoon. Feeling much colder with a brisk northerly wind. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Staying rather cold and windy on Tuesday, with perhaps a few snow showers along the east coast. Cold and dry with sunny spells on Wednesday and Thursday. Widespread frosts overnight.
